Bonjour et Bienvenue!

After two years of online conferences, I warmly welcome you in beautiful Québec City for the 48th annual in-person conference of the Society for Police and Criminal Psychology. I am very pleased to welcome those of you that have been with the Society for a long time now, as well as those who are new.

This year's conference, which marks the second time that the Society has met in Canada, has turned into one of the largest ever to be hosted by the Society. The numerous high-quality submissions we received was remarkable and led to an exciting and diverse program that will allow members to reflect upon and celebrate current accomplishments in the field of police and criminal psychology, to renew friendships and extend networks, and to jointly explore current and future research and practice directions.

To plan a conference of this magnitude is not a small task. To that end, I want to thank JoAnne Brewster, Michael Stolloff, Patrick Lussier, and the SPCP board members for providing their wisdom and guidance for the past two years; the program committee (Craig Bennell, Sarah Paquette & Marina Soroichinski) for helping me to organize all sessions and tracks, and the various committees that help ease the workload of organizing and hosting this event; my right-hand person, Claudele Gagnon, for her tremendous help and her meticulous work in support of many aspects of the conference; as well as all the volunteers, mostly university students, who have worked hard behind the scenes and who are going to be here throughout the conference to make sure that everything goes as smoothly as possible. I would also like to thank all of the sponsoring organizations for providing their generous financial support. Lastly, thanks to all conference participants for their presence and contributions, which are the foundation of this conference.

Please take the time to enjoy Quebec City to its fullest, from historical and cultural activities to outdoor adventures, award-winning restaurants, and vibrant nightlife.

Thank you all and enjoy SPCP 2022!

Nadine Deslauriers-Varin

SPCP President; Chair and host of SPCP 2022

Crime and the violent events they sometimes engender affect communities around the world. And Québec is no exception.

Our police officers, who also deal with distraught citizens on a daily basis, do the best they can to preserve the integrity of those in distress, while ensuring the safety of those nearby. All this makes increased research into criminal behaviour, motivations, and human actions within the criminal justice system essential. The urgent need for action is clear.

By gaining a better understanding of the factors that drive crime, we can develop concrete and lasting solutions that draw on scientific knowledge to make our communities safer and more inclusive. The Society for Police and Criminal Psychology (SPCP) has been pursuing that mission since 1975. By tapping into this knowledge transfer network, we've been able to intervene more effectively and continually improve our practices.

We are honoured to welcome hundreds of psychologists, researchers, criminologists, and other professionals to the city of Québec for the first time for the 48th SPCP Conference.

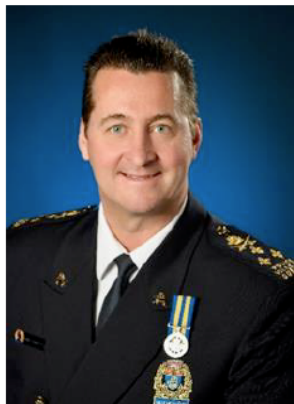

Québec is fortunate to have a number of departments, agencies, institutions, and schools in the field, making it a destination of choice for the event. I would like to thank Université Laval for its work on the conference.

And to all the delegates, welcome to Québec. I hope that in the busy days ahead, you will have the opportunity to experience the many charms of our city in the fall.

Enjoy the conference!

Bruno Marchand
Mayor of Québec City

Welcome to Québec City!

The Service de police de la Ville de Québec (SPVQ) is proud that the Society for Police and Criminal Psychology has chosen Québec City as host of its 2022 annual conference.

After two years in virtual mode, we are delighted to have you join us in the birthplace of French North America to network, share best practices, and hone your knowledge. While you're here, be sure to stroll through Old Québec and explore the many attractions that contribute to the city's charm.

Serving a population of more than 586,336 inhabitants, the SPVQ is responsible for the safety of this vibrant city, which is host to such major events as the Summer Festival and Winter Carnival. We thrive on big projects and are dedicated to delivering services adapted to the population's active lifestyle.

Our proactive and dedicated officers are firsthand witnesses to the changes taking place in our society. Over the past few years, as the pandemic wreaked havoc and disrupted our lives, they have adapted to new work methods and capably dealt with an upsurge in mental health problems, domestic violence, and other social issues.

I am proud of the job they do on a daily basis, and of their empathy and commitment. Despite changing and sometimes difficult working conditions, they have maintained their focus on people-oriented policing. I am also grateful to all the community organizations who partner with us daily to ensure that no one is left behind. Québec City is a close-knit community, and that makes us strong.

Take advantage of this conference to share best practices in your field. Police forces are appreciative of the opportunity to access knowledge that helps us improve our policing practices for the benefit of the public.

Best regards,

Denis Turcotte
Director – Service de police de la Ville de Québec
